

Bibliography

A. Printed Books.

I. John Dee

II. Before 1800

III. After 1800

A principal purpose of this bibliography is to provide full details of works usually referred to by short titles in the notes. Consequently, most of such works as have been cited on only one occasion are not included here, and a full reference has been given on citation. Similarly, groups of works consulted upon specialised topics discussed in particular passages but not thereafter recurred to are not listed here, but full details are given in the notes to the appropriate sections of the text (as e.g., works on Alkindi or Urso, in Ch. 5, n. 223, 248). Again it has not been thought necessary to attempt to include the many works profitably examined but to which there has been no occasion to make direct reference.

Another object is to list those works containing information or comment upon Dee personally. All these have been indicated by a prefatory capital delta, the sign Dee employed as a personal monogram. Omissions here--apart from oversight and sheer ignorance--fall into a number of categories:

1. Those in which Dee's name occurs in a string of incidentally cited names of Elizabethan figures (e.g., as G.N. Clark, Science and Social Welfare in the Age of Newton, Oxford, 1937).
2. Those which casually mention Dee in passing, without significant direct comment, to illustrate some point for which the name of almost any contemporary would have served equally well (e.g., as Bentham, Works, Vol. 8, 1843; but vide supra Ch. 2, n. 36).
3. Those in which Dee's name appears in some personally irrelevant relation, i.e., bare mentions of him as an ancestor of his descendants etc. (e.g., J.P. Malcolm, Londinium Redivivum, London, Vol. I, 1802, p. 72: a note of the burial in 1617 at St. Mary at Axe, of "John Dee, sonne of Mr. John Dee...").
4. Such works as contain only information taken from earlier works, included on this list, unaccompanied by fresh comment. (E.g., the references in Dover Wilson's Introduction, p. xlv et seq to the New Cambridge Shakespeare's Richard II, Cambridge, 1939, which are covered by this bibliography's inclusion of Holmshed's Chronicles, 1577, and Webb's introduction to A French Metrical Romance in Archaeologia, 1921.)
5. Catalogues which list without comment, printed works by Dee (e.g., F. Leigh Gardner, Catalogue Raisonné of Works on Occult Sciences, London, 1903, Vol. I, Rosicrucianism, Vol. III, Astrology) and in general, similar ones listing MSS.

6. Lastly no very careful or systematic attempt has been made to dredge through the proliferous ephemera of modern occultism despite its constant talismanic invocation of Dee's name. (E.g., there is no mention of the numerous references to Dee in the early numbers of Zadkiel's Almanac, though on "Zadkiel's" own interest in Dee vide supra ch. 2.)

No strict separation into "primary" and "secondary" sources proved possible, but a rough approximation to this is reflected by the division of books, apart from such as contain original writings by Dee himself, according to their date of composition, irrespective of the edition used, into the two classes before and after 1800. In such cases as the Publications of the Chetham Society, in which Dee is frequently mentioned since these are chiefly devoted to documents in some way concerning the history of Manchester, the division has, of necessity, been somewhat arbitrary. If the original texts there printed contain significant information about Dee, they have been placed in the first class; where Dee is principally a subject of editorial comment, in the second.

Bibliography

B. Manuscripts.

- I. Written by John Dee
- II. Owned by John Dee
- III. Concerning John Dee
- IV. Others

Note: This list does not include all MSS referred to in the notes, but only such as have been examined for the purposes of this study, commented on and usually quoted from in the text. Manuscripts mentioned in the notes merely as appearing in various catalogues and having some connection with Dee are not included. Dee's marginalia in printed books are noted against these works in the preceding part of the Bibliography, Sect. II, Before 1800.

Section I

MSS containing original writings of Dee (or "angelically" dictated to him) in autograph or transcription.
